summer of 2009, it quickly became one of the most widely read issues in the peer-reviewed journal's history. In fact, Prufrock Press, the journal's publisher, had so many requests for additional copies of that issue, extra copies from the original press run were quickly sold out. It seems that many individuals, universities, and gifted education programs around the country were using the special issue for professional development purposes.

To encourage the widest possible exposure of this important topic to gifted education professionals, Prufrock Press has made the decision to offer this issue of GCT free of charge as a downloadable PDF. The hotlink directs you to your issue- and to many other resources of Prufrock Press:
